ScreenCast-o-matic is a video recording and editing tool that can be utilized for self-producing videos. screencast-o-matic print - .Apple 'under review' over use of fair trade items Apple says it is “under review” after it was named in a report highlighting allegations of abuses within the global supply chain, which put the iPhone maker at the centre of claims that workers were forced to endure long working hours, slave wages and in some cases were not paid at all. The Fair Labor Association (FLA), which was set up to monitor labour conditions in the US, and the Fairphone Foundation, a Dutch not-for-profit organisation, brought claims to the International Labour Organisation (ILO) and the World Trade Organisation (WTO). In a letter dated 22 March, that was seen by Reuters on Wednesday, Apple said it has been “vigorously” enforcing its supplier code of conduct at its facilities, and it is “implementing new policies and measures to improve our working conditions”. “Some of the claims related to Apple’s supply chain are several years old,” the letter said. The letter was sent in response to a 17-page letter that was addressed to Apple CEO Tim Cook and included the company’s response to allegations that supplier factories lacked access to clean drinking water and that employees working on the assembly line faced high levels of toxic air. have factories in the developing world including Bangladesh, China, China, India, Indonesia and Pakistan. The FLA letter alleged that Apple's suppliers had not met their deadlines to build new factories in new countries. This followed a report that found that suppliers still lacked access to toilets at 50% of its supplier factories, and that workers at 40% of its supplier factories were unable to access clean drinking water during work hours, the FLA letter said. The letter said that the company implemented its first code of conduct with suppliers in 2010, which was updated in 2013. "In September 2016, Apple notified FLA of its new Supplier Code of Conduct (SCC), which was issued for our international operations, and it was implemented in March 2017," the letter said. "The SCC is a supplement to Apple's existing Supplier Code of Conduct, which is enforced at our facilities throughout the country.
