There are many features and tools available to you when you use Photoshop. You can design, paint, and edit any type of image or file. The number one thing to do in any of the programs and the industry standard for editing images, is to cut out a picture or selection of a subject and edit out the parts of the image you don't want to have. From there you can draw a new object on to the image with the appropriate brushes. While a lot of people are scared away from Photoshop because they see the daunting learning curve, those who have learned the software are now able to create beautiful artwork using the program, which is something its creators, and most importantly, its users, should be proud of. In addition to creating and modifying images, Photoshop is often used for creating some forms of animation. Before you can animate a sequence in Photoshop, however, you must first import the source image into Photoshop. A new bill would make it illegal for sex offenders to use peer-to-peer sites like LimeWire In all of the recent news about suspected child pornography hoarders, there have been no criminal charges and no arrests. But some lawmakers say the threat of criminal prosecution is just as powerful as actual criminal charges. A first-of-its-kind bill is being heard in the Assembly today would make it illegal for sex offenders to use peer-to-peer (P2P) sites like LimeWire. The bill (A3815) would also cover some other offenses like contributing to the delinquency of a minor and attempting to launder money. "If you were to provide a minor with alcohol or cigarettes, if you do that with the intent of giving them something to consume, that is a contributing to the delinquency of a minor," Bucco explained. In other words, child porn suspects could potentially be prosecuted for giving or lending their computers to their friends for watching movies and surfing the Web. Bucco, who is a member of the Statewide Sheriffs' Organization, has asked his Republican counterparts in the Assembly to support the bill, which he called "common sense legislation." He added that the measure has the potential to reduce the number of child pornography suspects who access P2P networks from one in five to one in 10. "What this bill does, really, is take a step back and realize that we are in a different world," Bucco said. "It's not only a child pornography world, it's not just a pedophile world. Now you've got your peers." Bucco was among a group of lawmakers that filed an amendment to the current bill that would make peer-to-peer usage a felony, without which it would be a misdemeanor. Although the amendment was declined, Bucco said he still would like to see the
